

The Advanced Laser Training Pistol

ATLP

The Advanced Laser Training Pistol (The ATLP) line of products are a series of training pistols aimed to make accidental/negligent discharges a thing of the past, by training shooters of all experience levels to exercise proper trigger finger discipline.

Equipped with a state-of-the-art sensor within the trigger guard, the ATLP is able to detect a finger falling inside the trigger guard, and furthermore is able to distinguish between an intended "squeeze of the trigger" versus improper trigger finger discipline. Once improper technique is found, an alarm will sound and two LED's will flash alongside the frame of the training gun, alerting the shooter of their error so that it may be corrected.

The ATLP is modeled after either the Glock 17 or Smith & Wesson M&P (the Sig P320 is schedule to arrive during 2nd quarter of 2020), is available in orange or black (dependent on model chosen), and comes pre-equipped with the Laser Ammo Sure-Strike™ laser cartridge (in either red or IR). The ATLP also equips a removable weighted magazine (with spare mags available for purchase), allowing the shooter to practice magazine changes.

The ATLP is an excellent training aid for not only first-time shooters, but also Law Enforcement & Military looking for a safe and effective way to train under pressure and instill the importance of proper technique to avoid accidental/negligent discharges.
